Ministers Feel Editors
Can Print Controversy

NASHVILLE--(BP)--Southern Baptist ministers believe editors of their denomination's papers should publish controversial news.

Out of 26 responses to a query from a leading Baptist magazine, only one person spoke against the printing of controversial news. Several who favored printing of such articles laid down conditions under which it should be printed.

The statements of the 26 ministers are contained in the "Pastor's Open Meeting" forum page in the July issue of the Baptist Program, a magazine sent to pastors, denominational workers, and other Southern Baptist leaders.

Emil Williams of Russellville, Ark., said "it would be difficult indeed to label matters of discussion as 'controversial' and 'non-controversial.' The question more to the point is, 'Does the editor have a right to make editorial comment on any subject?' My answer would be, 'Yes.'"

W. Everett Melton of Jacksonville, Fla., favored such discussion, asking, "Who is to decide what is and is not controversial?"

The ministers felt there were several reasons for discussing controversy.

"Is not the freedom of the press to be included in our Baptist state papers as well as any other paper?" declared Earl M. Thames, Jr., of Warner Robins, Ga.

"To some Baptists everything is controversial," according to Grayson Glass of Freeport, Tex.

"If these papers do not furnish information, the people will get it from other sources, often unreliable," was the attitude of Ollin J. Owens of Greenville, S. C.

Being "up-to-date" on controversial matters, the Baptist editor is "morally obligated to enlighten his readers," Jesse L. Gann of Wilsonville, Ala., commented.

But the lone dissenter, H. W. Connelly of Roanoke, Va., said in rebuttal, "There are better ways to settle Baptist controversies than through the Baptist papers. Sores of long standing have been made by undue publicity. . . . It is Christ's cause that suffers when papers fan the smoking embers into flame. . . . Editors of Baptist state papers should not discuss controversial questions."

Many agreed there were considerations under which an editor must work in reporting controversy.

"The press must be kept free. Controversial matters should be discussed from time to time . . . with love and malice toward none," affirmed Smoot Baker of Lancaster, S. C.

James T. Shirley of St. Louis, Mo., said controversy should be discussed but "in all fairness both sides of the issue should be presented."

Joe Stevens of Temple, Tex., said the editor must have the "emotional stability to remain objective."

"All discussion must be on the highest level of Christian ethics, in a spirit of love and loyalty for the total welfare of our denomination," was the opinion of Charles H. Rankin, La Junta, Colo.

"When writing editorially the editor should seek to clarify the issue (without taking sides) in order to help his readers . . ." said G. Lee McIntyre of Stoneville, N. C.

H. Wadell Waters of Bluefield, W. Va., summed it up by saying, "If the state Baptist papers of our Convention area are ever relegated to the brainwashing status of a mere denominational publicity sheet their effectiveness will certainly be altered, if not lost."

Boy Scout Information
Center To Be Proposed

LOUISVILLE--(BP)--A world "Baptist Scout Information Center" proposal was discussed at a meeting of the Association of Southern Baptists for Scouting here.

The group, which has no official tie with the Southern Baptist Convention, voted to bring the proposal to the attention of the executive committee of the Baptist World Alliance.

The association includes Southern Baptists interested in Boy Scout units sponsored by local Baptist churches. Joe C. Carrington, Austin, Tex., layman, is chairman of the association.

"Boys want Scouting and should get it under the sponsorship of our churches," Carrington said.

It was reported that in 15 Southern states there are 4380 units sponsored by Baptist churches. In these states, the number of Baptist Boy Scouts ranges from one-third to more than 60 per cent of the total number of Boy Scouts belonging to Protestant denominations.

Brooks Hays, then president of the Southern Baptist Convention, recommended a closer tie between Boy Scouting and Baptist churches.

The association met in Louisville because its members were here for sessions of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Seminary President Millard J. Berquist, who announced the arrangement, said Seats's knowledge of Africa caused him to be sought by the Graham team. Graham is planning a series of meetings in various parts of Africa next year.

Seats ended his missionary connections last year to join Midwestern Seminary's faculty.

Berquist also announced that Frank E. Royal, pastor of Southside Baptist Church, Abilene, Tex., had decided to remain in the pastorate and will not become a member of the seminary faculty.
