

October 11, 1962

Baptists Discuss
Higher Education

WASHINGTON (BP)--Church-related colleges face a new situation in America, thus giving rise to serious church-state problems, according to C. Emanuel Carlson, executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs here.

Carlson's remarks followed a national consultation of 158 Baptist leaders on the church-state problems in higher education.

These educators, pastors, denominational executives, editors and laymen spent three days talking about governmental participation in providing capital needs of the colleges, student aid programs, curriculum development, and church support for professional education and research.

The new situation facing church colleges, according to Carlson, has arisen from expanding governmental and national needs for scientists, engineers, technicians and other highly-trained personnel.

Traditionally, Carlson said, the church colleges have largely worked within the framework of the purposes of their sponsoring denominations. Now the national needs are added to the objectives of the churches.

The consultation was not a policy-making meeting and it took no positions on any of the problems discussed. The reports of the discussions were recorded and transmitted to the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs.

The group was unanimous in requesting the joint committee to continue its studies in the church-state problems in higher education.

"The reaction that stands out in my mind," Carlson said, "is that there is wide concern for our historic principles of a free church, including the freedom to operate institutions for its own purposes and with its own funds."

This was the sixth annual conference sponsored by the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs. Others have dealt with church-state problems in American tax policies, religion in education and the relation of the churches to public schools, and church-state problems in meeting human need.

The conference next year will consider church-state problems in mass communications. This will involve censorship, distribution of time on radio and television, possibly postal rates for church publications and similar problems.

The Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs is maintained by seven major Baptist groups in North America. They are the Southern Baptist Convention, American Baptist Convention, Baptist General Conference, North American Baptist General Conference, two National (Negro) Baptist Conventions, and the Baptist Federation of Canada.

-30-

Hawaii Secretary
Called By Methodist

(10-11-62)

HONOLULU (BP)--A few weeks ago, the Bell Telephone people demonstrated long distance dialing, direct, for the Southern Baptist Communication Conference in Nashville, Tenn.

One of the calls, at a rousing 4 a.m., awoke L. A. (Andy) Watson, executive secretary of the Alaska Baptist Convention, at Anchorage. Watson had been warned in advance of the call, as had Stanton H. Nash at Honolulu, executive secretary of the Hawaii Baptist Convention.

-more-

It was 5 o'clock in the morning in Honolulu. Both Watson and Nash briefly greeted the calling Baptist leaders. For the telephone company, which puts on such demonstrations for groups all the time, it was a routine successful demonstration.

This wouldn't have been news had it not been for a Kiwanis Club in Cleveland, Tenn. By coincidence this civic club got Anchorage and Honolulu and Nash (though not Watson) into the act a week later. This time, there was no forewarning for the Honolulu Baptist secretary.

"This is the Cleveland, Tenn., Kiwanis Club," the voice an ocean away explained. "We just wanted to know how the weather is in Anchorage."

"I don't know...this is Honolulu, Hawaii," Nash replied, followed by an earpiece roar of laughter.

Voice at Cleveland: "This is (Nash couldn't make out the preacher's name which came next), pastor of the Methodist Church in Cleveland. The telephone company is giving us a direct dialing demonstration and I was trying to call one of our parsonages in Anchorage."

"Well, that's about par for you Methodists," Nash digged a trifle.

The Tennessee voice once more: "Well, I always said there was a lot of water between us." (More laughter.) "Aloha."

-30-

Folks and Facts.....

(10-11-62)

....."Stetson University and Florida Baptists," an official history of the relationship between the Baptist university at DeLand, Fla., and the Florida Baptist Convention is being released. The book was written by the late Dr. Harry C. Garwood and is being published by the Florida Baptist Historical Society. Garwood, a Stetson graduate, teacher, dean and acting president, retired as dean-emeritus in 1955, then continued his work at Stetson as curator of the Stetson and Baptist archives and as university historian. (BP)

-30-

Earle Bradley, 60,
Carolina Leader, Dies

(10-11-62)

RALEIGH, N. C. (BP)--Earle L. Bradley, 60, promotional leader for the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina here, died Oct. 5 after suffering his second heart attack in five weeks.

Bradley joined the state convention staff in 1944 in the field of general promotion under then General Secretary M. A. Huggins. Three years ago, when the convention reorganized its staff, he received the title director of stewardship promotion and editorial services.

Bradley's service to Baptists had been in North Carolina almost completely. He was pastor of churches in three Carolina cities--his native Asheville, and in Spencer and Wilmington.

John W. Lambert of St. John's Baptist Church here, Bradley's pastor, presided at the funeral in Raleigh's First Baptist Church. Huggins spoke and the present general secretary, Douglas M. Branch, read scripture.

He is survived by his wife, a son and a daughter, all of Raleigh. He had been in a local hospital recovering from the first attack when the second one came.

-30-

Cupid Hits Baptist
Teletype Line Again

NASHVILLE (BP)--The Southern Baptist teletype circuit has played Cupid again!

With the announcement that Miss Sharon Williams will wed Jim Cox Dec. 22, the secret of the second teletype-fostered romance was out.

Miss Williams is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben C. Williams of Midwest City, Okla. Cox is son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cox of Atlanta.

Cox is a student at George Peabody College here, majoring in English. He expects to graduate in the fall of 1963. Miss Williams is interim secretary for Gene Kerr, administrative assistant at the Tennessee Baptist Convention office here.

"Sharon and I were first introduced to each other on the teletype network in June, 1960 when I was press representative at Ridgecrest Baptist Assembly," Cox said. Ridgecrest in North Carolina had a teletype machine; so did Oklahoma City where the Oklahoma Baptist Building is located.

Miss Williams worked as a teletypist in the Oklahoma City office. When Jim found out--via teletype--that Sharon had red hair, "that did it!" he said. "I had never liked red hair and could never fancy myself getting interested in anyone with red hair."

But, the ways of romance were unfathomable even to Solomon. Cupid was not foiled so easily. When, in May, 1962, Sharon came to Nashville for instruction before going to Glorieta, N. M., to operate the Baptist assembly teletype there, she and Jim met for the first time face to face.

Jim said it was love at first sight, or at least from the first date, during her brief stay in Nashville last May.

All summer long, all known communications channels between Atlanta, where Jim worked on a daily newspaper, and Glorieta were used for sweet nothings between the starry-eyed pair.

They plan to be married in Nashville. Jim, after finishing at Peabody, aims at a full-time job with the Sunday School Board.

Meanwhile, there's a postscript to the first teletype romance which led to a wedding back in October, 1961. Mr. and Mrs. Jim Newton (she, the former Pat Tullos of Jackson, Miss., Baptist teletype office) of Dallas, disclosed to friends the expected arrival next spring of a future teletypist, er, addition to the family.

October 11, 1962

Baptists Discuss
Higher Education

WASHINGTON (BP)--Church-related colleges face a new situation in America, thus giving rise to serious church-state problems, according to C. Emanuel Carlson, executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs here.

Carlson's remarks followed a national consultation of 158 Baptist leaders on the church-state problems in higher education.

These educators, pastors, denominational executives, editors and laymen spent three days talking about governmental participation in providing capital needs of the colleges, student aid programs, curriculum development, and church support for professional education and research.

The new situation facing church colleges, according to Carlson, has arisen from expanding governmental and national needs for scientists, engineers, technicians and other highly-trained personnel.

Traditionally, Carlson said, the church colleges have largely worked within the framework of the purposes of their sponsoring denominations. Now the national needs are added to the objectives of the churches.

The consultation was not a policy-making meeting and it took no positions on any of the problems discussed. The reports of the discussions were recorded and transmitted to the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs.

The group was unanimous in requesting the joint committee to continue its studies in the church-state problems in higher education.

"The reaction that stands out in my mind," Carlson said, "is that there is wide concern for our historic principles of a free church, including the freedom to operate institutions for its own purposes and with its own funds."

This was the sixth annual conference sponsored by the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs. Others have dealt with church-state problems in American tax policies, religion in education and the relation of the churches to public schools, and church-state problems in meeting human need.

The conference next year will consider church-state problems in mass communications. This will involve censorship, distribution of time on radio and television, possibly postal rates for church publications and similar problems.

The Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs is maintained by seven major Baptist groups in North America. They are the Southern Baptist Convention, American Baptist Convention, Baptist General Conference, North American Baptist General Conference, two National (Negro) Baptist Conventions, and the Baptist Federation of Canada.

-30-

Hawaii Secretary
Called By Methodist

(10-11-62)

HONOLULU (BP)--A few weeks ago, the Bell Telephone people demonstrated long distance dialing, direct, for the Southern Baptist Communication Conference in Nashville, Tenn.

One of the calls, at a rousing 4 a.m., awoke L. A. (Andy) Watson, executive secretary of the Alaska Baptist Convention, at Anchorage. Watson had been warned in advance of the call, as had Stanton H. Nash at Honolulu, executive secretary of the Hawaii Baptist Convention.

-more-

It was 5 o'clock in the morning in Honolulu. Both Watson and Nash briefly greeted the calling Baptist leaders. For the telephone company, which puts on such demonstrations for groups all the time, it was a routine successful demonstration.

This wouldn't have been news had it not been for a Kiwanis Club in Cleveland, Tenn. By coincidence this civic club got Anchorage and Honolulu and Nash (though not Watson) into the act a week later. This time, there was no forewarning for the Honolulu Baptist secretary.

"This is the Cleveland, Tenn., Kiwanis Club," the voice an ocean away explained. "We just wanted to know how the weather is in Anchorage."

"I don't know...this is Honolulu, Hawaii," Nash replied, followed by an earpiece roar of laughter.

Voice at Cleveland: "This is (Nash couldn't make out the preacher's name which came next), pastor of the Methodist Church in Cleveland. The telephone company is giving us a direct dialing demonstration and I was trying to call one of our parsonages in Anchorage."

"Well, that's about par for you Methodists," Nash digged a trifle.

The Tennessee voice once more: "Well, I always said there was a lot of water between us." (More laughter.) "Aloha."

-30-

Folks and Facts.....

(10-11-62)

....."Stetson University and Florida Baptists," an official history of the relationship between the Baptist university at DeLand, Fla., and the Florida Baptist Convention is being released. The book was written by the late Dr. Harry C. Garwood and is being published by the Florida Baptist Historical Society. Garwood, a Stetson graduate, teacher, dean and acting president, retired as dean-emeritus in 1955, then continued his work at Stetson as curator of the Stetson and Baptist archives and as university historian. (BP)

-30-

Earle Bradley, 60,
Carolina Leader, Dies

(10-11-62)

RALEIGH, N. C. (BP)--Earle L. Bradley, 60, promotional leader for the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina here, died Oct. 5 after suffering his second heart attack in five weeks.

Bradley joined the state convention staff in 1944 in the field of general promotion under then General Secretary M. A. Huggins. Three years ago, when the convention reorganized its staff, he received the title director of stewardship promotion and editorial services.

Bradley's service to Baptists had been in North Carolina almost completely. He was pastor of churches in three Carolina cities--his native Asheville, and in Spencer and Wilmington.

John W. Lambert of St. John's Baptist Church here, Bradley's pastor, presided at the funeral in Raleigh's First Baptist Church. Huggins spoke and the present general secretary, Douglas M. Branch, read scripture.

He is survived by his wife, a son and a daughter, all of Raleigh. He had been in a local hospital recovering from the first attack when the second one came.

-30-

Cupid Hits Baptist
Teletype Line Again

NASHVILLE (BP)--The Southern Baptist teletype circuit has played Cupid again!

With the announcement that Miss Sharon Williams will wed Jim Cox Dec. 22, the secret of the second teletype-fostered romance was out.

Miss Williams is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben C. Williams of Midwest City, Okla. Cox is son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cox of Atlanta.

Cox is a student at George Peabody College here, majoring in English. He expects to graduate in the fall of 1963. Miss Williams is interim secretary for Gene Kerr, administrative assistant at the Tennessee Baptist Convention office here.

"Sharon and I were first introduced to each other on the teletype network in June, 1960 when I was press representative at Ridgecrest Baptist Assembly," Cox said. Ridgecrest in North Carolina had a teletype machine; so did Oklahoma City where the Oklahoma Baptist Building is located.

Miss Williams worked as a teletypist in the Oklahoma City office. When Jim found out--via teletype--that Sharon had red hair, "that did it!" he said. "I had never liked red hair and could never fancy myself getting interested in anyone with red hair."

But, the ways of romance were unfathomable even to Solomon. Cupid was not foiled so easily. When, in May, 1962, Sharon came to Nashville for instruction before going to Glorieta, N. M., to operate the Baptist assembly teletype there, she and Jim met for the first time face to face.

Jim said it was love at first sight, or at least from the first date, during her brief stay in Nashville last May.

All summer long, all known communications channels between Atlanta, where Jim worked on a daily newspaper, and Glorieta were used for sweet nothings between the starry-eyed pair.

They plan to be married in Nashville. Jim, after finishing at Peabody, aims at a full-time job with the Sunday School Board.

Meanwhile, there's a postscript to the first teletype romance which led to a wedding back in October, 1961. Mr. and Mrs. Jim Newton (she, the former Pat Tullos of Jackson, Miss., Baptist teletype office) of Dallas, disclosed to friends the expected arrival next spring of a future teletypist, er, addition to the family.

Cutlines

Baptist Press Photo

October 11, 1962

After Rep. Edith Green (D., Ore.) spoke to a Baptist public affairs conference in Washington, D. C., she renewed acquaintance with a former colleague in the U. S. House of Representatives, C. B. Deane of North Carolina. Deane, also a former lay president of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina, is a member of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, sponsor of the conference. (BP) Photo