NASHVILLE (BP)--Teh Koon CHONG, 17, in the United States by various influences of three Southern Baptist Convention agencies--the Foreign Mission Board, Radio and Television Commission, and Sunday School Board.

In 1965, when he was 14, he was recruited by the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board and missionary G. H. Clark to work in Malaya. He was recruited by the board, but he violated the church, filed with the board and he never joined the church.

Now, 22 years later, he is working as an artist for the Baptist Sunday School Board.

As a young man, he was recruited by the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board in 1965 and was in Malaya for two years. He was recruited by the board, but he violated the church, filed with the board and he never joined the church.

A missionary told him that he was recruited by the board, but he violated the church, filed with the board and he never joined the church.

At camp, he was recruited by the board, but he violated the church, filed with the board and he never joined the church.

They suggested that he should go to Malaya. A two-year correspondence course was given to him in Malaya.

In the meantime, he had been working as an artist in Malaya. He was recruited by the board, but he violated the church, filed with the board and he never joined the church.

A growing feeling that he should go to Malaya led him to enroll in the Malaya Baptist Sunday School.

After two years in the Malaya Sunday School, John knew he should not enter the pastorate, but he wanted to use his talents and education as a lawyer in helping to spread the gospel. He decided to leave Malaya and go to Malaya where an older brother was already in school.

Last June, John received his diploma in art and design from Belfast College of Art. He took the qualifications of the Society of Topographic Designers and of the Society of Industrial Arts and Designers and went to work for a firm in Belfast. He has been accepted for membership by both British groups. The Society of Industrial Arts and Designers notified him of his acceptance after he came to the United States.

While in Belfast, John worked as a graphic designer for Ulster Television, and for a building design partnership. He also does additional designs, cover designs, magazine layouts, layouts for hotels, brochures, etc. The assignment of the project to which he is assigned work is 25 publications, including "The Training Union Magazine" and the "Church Administration" magazine.

From London, he came to Nashville--a journey of 13,500 miles--is the story of John Teh's life from school boy to artist. Whether Nashville will be another stopover, or is his destination, John does not know.

But he does know his future is still being shaped by the role of Southern Baptist Convention agencies and their personnel in his life.

PLAINVIEW, Tex. (BP) - A Wayland College class will study in January a "classroom" so exotic students probably would have little chance of passing the course were it not that they will be studying the classroom itself.

A biology class taught by Harnid E. Reese, associate professor of Biology at Wayland Baptist College, with several guests will spend two weeks of the microterm in Jamaica, the West Indies, studying flora and fauna of the island in the tidal zone and from seashore to mountain peak.

The group was scheduled to leave Plainview Dec. 26 and travel by automobiles to Miami, Fla.

From Miami they will fly by jet to Kingston, Jamaica, on New Year's Eve. Dorothy McCoy, professor of mathematics at Wayland, last summer visited Jamaica and made arrangements for the Wayland group to stay at a guides' encampment near Kingston.
